(1340 N. S. H. R.)

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE:

Denmark Dare is a blood bay stallion, foaled May, 1896. Sire, Chester Dare 10, by Black Squirrel 88; dam, Mollie, by Holla Denmark; he by Star Denmark 71; 2nd dam by Jno. Akin.

MR. J. V. BOYD, of Shelbyville, Ky., his former owner and one of the best saddle horse breeders in the State, describes him thus: "Denmark Dare is 16 hands high, weight 1,200 lbs., beautiful head, good neck, the best back you ever saw on a horse, good legs, fine mane and tail and carries tail right. This horse goes all the gaits fast and right." He is a high school horse and the best bred stallion in the country. Standard and registered.

This horse will be found at my stable one mile east of Bewleyville on Louisville road and will be permitted to serve mares at $10 for colts that stand up and suck. While Denmark Dare is but a youngster, he has made a reputation that would do credit to any living stallion as a sire, and we kindly invite our friends and patrons to call and inspect him. You must see him to appreciate his greatness.

Ben.

This famous Washington county Jack for utility mules will be found at the above mentioned place where he will be ready for service at $10 for a colt that stands up and sucks. BEN is 15 hands high, black, with the best bone I ever saw on anybody's jack and has proven himself to be a great breeder.

To the get of Denmark Dare I will give a premium of $10 for the best general purpose colt. To the get of BEN I will give $10 for the mule colt worth the most money.

A few mares from a distance kept on grass at $1.50 per month. Accidents at owner's risk. Thanking you for past patronage and hoping for continuation of same, I am

Respectfully,

CHAS. H. DRURY, Bewleyville, Kentucky.

A TRIP FROM SAN FRANCISCO TO MANILA.

Written in diary form, by I. W. D., formerly of Baittown.

Dec. 31. At 6 o'clock the camp is awakened by the single sounding reveille. We are up and astir at once, for we have all been looking forward to this day, some of us with pleasure and great anxiety with some degree of apprehension. For, with most of the boys, it is the first sea voyage. Break fast over, we sling our haversacks, canteens and blanket rolls and await the command to fall in at 8 o'clock. The sharp, clear voice of the first sergeant is heard. "Fall in!" is the word. Quickly the battery forms in line and is mustered by the captain. When all have been found present, the captain commands: "Right face! Forward march!" and we are off for the dock of strong, the 7th, 30th and 24th batteries, the last two of which are mountain batteries, equipped with three-inch Howitzers, packed on the backs of Mule teams, but all our equipment is left behind as we take the equipment of the batteries we are relieving.

A number of about ten yards brings us to the dock, where we board the U. S. A. transport tender, the "Thames." As we go aboard we find that we are preceded by 500 unassigned recruits, who are destined for foreign service with the various cavalry and infantry regiments in the Philippines. A detachment of sixty men of the local corps, a number of men returning from the Philippines, and about thirty clerks, bookkeepers and stenographers comprise something over 1,000 souls all told, in our little boat.

The day is perfect, not a cloud to be seen as we drop down the bay. The sight that greets the eyes is good to look upon, the clear water of the bay almost unbroken by the verdant hills of the Coast Range in a comparatively small spot covered by the city of San Francisco and its environs. And over all an azure sky with the sun almost at its zenith.

We soon pass the Golden Gate and a little south of the island and a little west of the city we see a small public building, which is the headquarters of the United States government. To our right is Angel Island and Ft. McDowell, its old fort. A few miles beyond is the Presidio, a large military reservation with barracks, camps and drill grounds. We glide smoothly onward, and in a few minutes we have on our left, Ft. Winifred Scott, a large, white, fortification built in 1873 and, in its day, a splendid piece of military engineering, not now abandoned. The old muzzled long cannons are lying about or stacked up like cord-wood, as they are no longer of service their day being past. A few stars from a nearby gun would cause the old walls to fall in to ruins.

To our right is a high bluff on which can be seen three immense guns, said to be placed at a greater elevation than any coast defense guns in the world, except two recently mounted on the rock of Gibraltar. As we go further the shores on either side are lined with a number of batteries of high power guns and mortars, some of which cannot be seen from the bay, as they are of the disappearing type, placed behind hidden embankments of earth and concrete, where they are loaded and sighted, only rising long enough to fire a 1,000 lb. projectile. The sharp, clear voice of the first sergeant is heard. "Fall in!" is the word. Quickly the battery forms in line and is mustered by the captain. When all have been found present, the captain commands: "Right face! Forward march!" and we are off for the dock of strong, the 7th, 30th and 24th batteries, the last two of which are mountain batteries, equipped with three-inch Howitzers, packed on the backs of Mule teams, but all our equipment is left behind as we take the equipment of the batteries we are relieving.

At 12:30 p. m. We are now passing through the Golden Gate and out on the broad Pacific. At our left side and a little to the rear appears the rock on which the passenger steamer, "Ho Jansen," grounded a few years ago with a terrible loss of life.

The Government is now building a lighthouse on this rock, to guard against further catastrophes.

To our right is a high bluff crowded by a lighthouse and to our left is a small cliff on which is built the famous Cliff House. At the base of the cliff lie the sea stacks, on which can be seen some of the sea lion variety basking themselves in the sun, while farther to the southward stretches a distance of twelve or fifteen miles, can be seen the outline of Mt. Tamalpais, on the side of which runs a zig-zag railway, which is said to be the crook-necked railway in the world. There is a station on the summit which commands a fine view of the surrounding country.

A friend and myself stand on the stern of the ship and watch the fast receding view. Our hearts are thrilled, but nevertheless, touched by a sadness, for we are leaving the shores of dear, old America, the land of our home and birth, but we are comforted by the thought that some two years hence we will find ourselves standing on the bow of some ship gliding at the same which is now drifting lower and lower to the bottom.

At 2:30 p. m. We are now passing the Farallone Islands, two barren crags jutting out of the water, on the largest of which is a lighthouse and wireless telegraph station. The sea is rather rough and choppy. Some of the boys are already leaning over the rail feeling the seas.

At 3:30 p. m. Only the outline of Mt. Tamalpais can be seen now and we get at its bay outline for the last time. We go below to supper and find that a few of the boys have already gone to their bunks and many more are sitting around with a wondering look on their faces and tell us that if you never saw a human being in the lowest depths of subzero you never saw a man seaward. I go on deck to enjoy the fresh air and beautiful night, but must confess that I feel a peculiar sensation. It seems that some of my interior anatomy is rising altogether too high, but I am fighting it hard and think I will win out.

At 9:30 p. m. I now undertake the difficult task of preparing for bed. The trouble is that the deck seems to come up to me a descending foot and with equal perversity insists on going down when what I am expecting it to come up.

Jan. 1, 1905. I am up and astir long before dawn and spend an hour watching our good ship part the waters as she forges steadily ahead. The day is fine until about noon, when the sky is overcast with a thin film of clouds and a fairly strong wind is blowing and the sea is rolling in long heavy swells. Still none of the men are seasick. Some are wishing the ship would sink or anything would happen so they could escape their present misery.

At 9:30 p. m. In company with a friend I am again on deck. The sky is heavy and a stiff gale blowing but the horizon can be seen distinctly. An old sailor tells me that as long as the sky line can be seen there need be no fear of a severe storm. We sighted a sailing ship about 3 p. m. We are being followed by a flock of sea gulls, which feed on the refuse thrown overboard.

Jan. 2. If the reader will pardon me I will give a brief explanation of nautical terms and a few rough points on the construction of our ship.

The right side of a ship is starboard, the left port. It used to be larboard but that was abandoned because of the similarity of the two names. Forward is that part of the ship in front of the bridge and includes about one-third of the ship. Aft is that part in rear of the cabin deck, and between fore and aft is amid ship, which includes the bridge and cabin deck. The bridge serves the same purpose as the pilot house on a steam boat; it is the post of the officer on watch and the steersman. The foremast is the extreme forward part of the ship and is used as quarters for the crew. The Thomas is 8,000 tons burden, 400 feet in length and draws twenty-nine feet of water. She has burned an average of eighty tons of coal a day since leaving San Francisco. She is equipped with dynamo for lighting and condensing apparatus for distilling salt water and cold storage, and an ice plant. In fact, everything is made as comfortable as circumstances will permit.

The routine on ship board is as follows: Wake up at 6 a. m.; breakfast, 6:30 a. m.; setting up duff, 8:30 a. m.; guard mount at 9 a. m.; signal drill at 9:30 a. m.; inspection at 10:30 a. m.; and dinner at 12:30. In the afternoon signal drill at 2 p. m.; supper at 4 o'clock p. m.; and the remainder of the day is spent at leisure. This is a fine day. The ship is pitching considerably but causes little discomfort, as most of the men have become accustomed to the motion, but yet few are still wishing themselves at the bottom of "Dave Jones' locker."

There is nothing to be seen but water, water everywhere; not a living thing except an occasional guano bird, a bird that resembles me of an immense ball bat, with the addition of web feet and few are the want of the sea of a herring. The wings are narrower but seem to sustain it well in flight. This bird produces most of the commercial fertilizer known as guano, which is found in immense deposits on some of the smaller islands of the Pacific.

Jan. 3. Another fine day; a few broken clouds are seen here and there. Sighted a steamer on our starboard side, bound eastward, too far away to see who she was. We had a number of amateur boxing contests this afternoon which caused no end of amusement. Some of the contestants displayed considerable skill, but most of them were conspicuous for their awkwardness. The lady passengers appeared to enjoy the fun fully as much as we. I met two men today whom I had known and soldiered with in '98. How small this world of ours really is.

Jan. 4. Weather still fine. After the routine work of the day was done I spent the afternoon lounging about the deck reading and smoking. More boxing contests, which were marred by two accidents. One man was knocked against the rail, which cut a gash in his head. Another broke his hand on the head of his opponent. The guard then stopped the boxing for the present. I myself think there is too much brutality in it. Probably would not think so if it was good with the "fists" but once had sensations in a very severe form. I saw several others who, in addition to their desire for fame, had a good stiff solar plexus for just such cases as mine.

Jan. 5. A heavy rain fell this morning, ceasing about 10:00 a. m. The sun then came out shining brightly. The afternoon was fine. The boys are lounging about in groups, some talking, others reading or writing.

At 8 p. m. A heavy rain is falling and the sun is running high. I experienced a delightful sensation by leaning over the rail and feeling out over the water. A small group of men have gathered under an awning and are singing some plantain melody, among which I heard Down on the Swallow River, Dixie and My Old Kentucky Home. I noticed a young lad to-day who seemed to be suffering from a house-sickness in a very severe form. It sometimes causes death. Of course it must have a name, so the doctors call it nostalgia. I have a great deal of it in the army where there are 40 many young men who, for the first time, have broken loose from the influence of home and mother and a case of measles made its appearance today.

Jan. 6. Last night was the roughest we have had yet. I was awakened at least half a dozen times by the noise of articles rolling about the deck. The sea was so rough today that we could not set up the tables, so we had to eat without them as best we could.

At 9:30 p. m. The wind has abated considerably. I hope it will be calm to-morrow, as we expect to reach Honolulu. In two cases of measles today. I am afraid we will be quarantined at Honolulu and will not be permitted ashore, if so I will be greatly disappointed, as I have heard that it is such a beautiful place, and I am very anxious to see it.

Jan. 7. This has been a perfect day. Sky clear and air balmy. Have made good time and expect to reach Honolulu some time tonight. I could leave the hour, we are expected to arrive by adding a number of the crew, but I suppose their patience is taxed to the utmost by such questions so I refrain from asking any more.

At 8 o'clock p. m. we met the army transport "Sherman" returning from Manila. One thing that surprises me greatly is the scarcity of fish in sight. Have not seen a single one myself but some of the boys tell me that they have seen a few flying fish. I have not seen even an albatross today. I will close for today and go on deck for a breath of fresh air. We will pass Molokai, the leper island, about 12:00 p. m.

Jan. 8. At 5 a. m. I am up astir to see what is going on and find that we are lying to in the offing of the bay. The lights of Honolulu can be seen in front of us, while to our right is Diamond Head, a bold, rugged promontory one, an active volcano, but long since extinct. As the dawn begins to appear we steam in towards the pier. Everybody is now on deck taking in the beauty of the surrounding scene. We line the rail and push and crowd each other good naturedly for points of vantage. The sun is just rising, I think it is one of the most beautiful sunrises I ever saw but it would be impossible for me to describe it, so I will not try, but I hear many exclamations of delight which would be uncalculated for by an ordinary sailor. A sail boat comes steaming toward us, followed by its tug launch. As the tug comes nearer it proves to be the pilot and health officer of the port. The all boat is manned by a swarthy, muscular-looking Kanaka, who handles her with what seems to me great skill. Both officers come aboard and, after a brief inspection of the hospital, the yellow flag at our mast head comes fluttering down, which means that all is well and that we will be permitted to go ashore. We breathe freely once more, for we were afraid that the ship would be quarantined. The tug takes us past the bridge and we feel our way slowly toward the pier. On arriving I go ashore at once in company with two friends. I hunt up the postoffice, mail some letters and then begin to look for the points of interest. Honolulu, the capital of the Hawaiian group, is located on the island of Oahu, and contains about twenty-five thousand inhabitants. It has every appearance of a modern city, an excellent street railway system, banks, schools and churches, and in fact all that goes to make an up-to-date city, excepting places of amusements. There is one opera house but it is seldom used, as such places do not pay because of the large Asiatic population. I saw a number of saloons but not as many as are usually found in an American city of this size. One of the first things that caught my eye was the name "Kentucky Saloon" spread out over the side of a building. I am always glad to see the name of that dear, old state, but would rather see it serving a more honorable and useful purpose. We first visited the palace of King Kamehameha. It is a fine structure built of stone of coral formation. The main entrance is set off by a row of massive columns and a bronze statue of Kamehameha stands in front of the main entrance. The palace is used as a public building. We next visited the palace of Queen Liliuokalani, the last ruler of the Kingdom of Kamehameha, who was deposed by the whites during the revolution. The islands, as you all know, were annexed to the United States in '98.

We next traversed a street car, which took us through the business portion of the city and out into the residential district, which is one continuous flow of garden, flowers, shrubbery and trees all growing in unending profusion, among which I saw the cocoanut and date palms, the bayonet and banana trees. The roads look as though the beach for some distance. About two miles out we left the car and walked through a Kapalani park, beyond which lay Camp McKinley, where two companies of U. S. Coast Artillery are stationed. We took dinner with the 92nd Co., and after a short stay again took a walk through the park.

We paid a visit to the aquarium, where I saw what is said to be one of the finest collections of fish in the world. I never believed it possible for fish to exist in such grotesque forms. One had a face for all the world like a baboon, another a face and head like a bull-dog, one with a tough leathery-looking skin covered with spikes like a porcupine, and dozens of others I would like to mention but I am afraid the reader is already out of patience, so there are only two others that I will mention and these, undoubtedly, you have all seen or heard about, the octopus or devil fish and the shark. The devil fish about ten feet in length, was kept in a tank of water about four feet in depth and about twenty-five feet in length. I watched him about half an hour and during that time he was never still for one moment, but was continually swimming around and around. The keeper told me that he did not thrive in captivity, as they soon wear themselves out swimming and lashing about the tank.

The day was drawing to a close when we left the aquarium and walked down the drive toward Diamond Head, passing on the way some very fine residences, among them the home of Claus Spreckles, the angler king. We soon reached the lighthouse at the point of Diamond Head, and, after listening awhile to the surf beating on the rocks, we retraced our steps and soon found ourselves at home on the transport, too snugly tired out. (To be continued.)

A Fortune For You.

If you want money write for a book which I will send free for a short time to all desiring it. The important problems of successful money-making are explained, showing how millions become rich. The book is especially interesting, as you can do the same when you know how. It tells how you may make large sums of money with limited capital, and how you may become independent, whether your income is large or small. Attractive, interesting, profitable. My book was written especially for those who desire to better their financial condition. It gives facts which may help you make money and may be the basis of a fortune. My book will be sent free, though doing this will cost thousands of dollars. My object is not to make a profit from its sale. The man who desires to better his financial condition, it gives facts which may help you make money and may be the basis of a fortune. THE GREAT FAMILY MEDICINE

Theodore's Black-Draught comes near regulating the entire system and keeping the body in health in any other medicine made. It is always ready in any emergency to treat ailments that are frequent in any family, such as indigestion, biliousness, colds, diarrhoea, and stomach ache.

Theodore's Black-Draught is the standard, never-failing remedy for stomach, bowel, liver and kidney troubles. It is a cure for the diseases of the blood which so frequently afflict the human race. It is as good for children as it is for grown persons. A dose of this medicine every day will soon cure the most obstinate case of dyspepsia or constipation, and when taken as directed brings quick relief.

DAVID LEE, Dec. 5, 1903.

Theodore's Black-Draught has been a family doctor for five years and we want no other. When we feel that we are taking a dose and are all right in twelve hours. We have used it for the colic of our baby, but not alone just as well as Theodore's Black-Draught. J. H. B. BABBAGE.

FLOUR CERTAINLY SCARCE.

A Louisville Commission Merchant Couldn't Fill 5-Barrel Order.

That Louisville has grown greatly in the past few months as a flour market is evidenced by the fact that at one time an order from a merchant in this city for five barrels of flour was only partially filled by a commission merchant in that city, who was not able to find the full amount in the city.

The local merchant who made the order was the late Samuel Heist, and the Louisville dealer was J. E. Haynes. A letter from Mr. Heist to Mr. Haynes, stating that the order in question could not be filled, is in the possession of the former's nephew, Marion J. Heist, of Henderson, formerly of this city. Samuel Heist supplied the country around here with flour at the time, as there was no flour mill here then.

The letter in question reads as follows: Louisville, Ky., Jan. 12, 1909.

Mr. S. Heist.

Bought of J. E. Haynes, groceries, Produce and Commission Merchant, No. 401 Main-street.

By cash. $40.00

Dear Sir—Above I send you the balance of your order if I can get it by next trip. It is not, as soon as I can. Flour is very scarce, hardly a supply for city trade, I think. It will be more plentiful in a few days. I have here entered you a credit for money received. Yours very respectfully,

J. E. HAYNES.

Mrs. Eliza Blaine returned from Florida to her home in Stephensburg last week. She spent the winter at Jacksonville and St. Augustine and reports a very pleasant visit.

High Pressure Days.

Men and women alike have to work incessantly with brain and hand to hold their own nowadays. Never were the demands of business, the wants of the family, the requirements of society, more numerous. The first effect of the pressurework efforts to keep up with all these things is commonly seen in a weakened or debilitated condition of the nervous system, which results in dyspepsia, defective nutrition of both body and brain, and in extreme cases in complete nervous prostration.

It is clearly seen that what is needed is what we can obtain in cod liver oil, and to the nerves, and keep the digestive and assimilative functions healthy and active. From personal knowledge, we can recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on all the vital organs, builds up the whole system, and fits men and women for these high-pressure days.

A Willing Worker.

"Ma, what are the folks in our church getting up a subscription for?" "To send our minister on a vacation to Europe."

"An' won't there be no church while he's gone?" "No preacher's salary, I guess."

"Ma, I got $123 saved up in my bank. Can I give that?"—Cleveland Leader.

Last Tuesday afternoon, Miss Eva Herndon entertained very delightfully for her visitors, Misses Charlotte and Alice Ritter of Clarksville, Tenn.

Each guest was asked to bring a picture of herself or herself with a baby. These were later distributed among the company with cards on which each was to guess the original of the different pictures. Much merriment was caused by the numerous errors. This feature was followed by a "Black Cat Party." The guests were presented with cards decorated with black cats, and each bearing thirteen questions, the answers to which all began with the letter "B."

In the "Bash" contest, Mr. Harry Kemper won the prize and Miss Jessie Brady was the fortunate one in the conundrums, both of their cards being perfect. The prizes were large bouquets of exquisite carnations and ferns.

The home was beautifully decorated with cut flowers. Refreshments were served by three little girls in white and pink. Misses Rosa Lewis, Nellie Smith and Bessie Wraher.
